A warm hello from Churchtown Farm!

We often hear from new customers that they discovered our flowers because a friend kindly recommended them. In the run up to Christmas our flowers are one of the easiest, yet thoughtful, presents you can give. If you have a friend in a Christmas list pickle, maybe Scilly Flowers would be a helpful recommendation?

We genuinely value your feedback and we've received some lovely comments recently; you'll see a few as you read on. Of course, when sending fresh flowers, occasionally things don't go perfectly. But you can order with confidence knowing it's easy to get in touch with us at the farm by phone or email and that all our flowers are guaranteed.

We've been continuing to update our website so it might look a little different from your last visit – hope you like it! And now you can use Google and Apple pay for an even speedier checkout.

Simply the best

Earlier this year both The Guardian and The Independent consumer tested flower delivery services and both declared Scilly Flowers – 'Best Budget Flowers'! They also praised our narcissi for their scent and beautiful simplicity. We're rather chuffed by this double endorsement.

Not that we really see ourselves as, 'budget', it's more that our flowers are naturally great value because they're grown outdoors and sent direct from where they're picked on the Isles of Scilly.

What's in the box?

When you send our flowers you don't always get to see your thoughtful present arrive. We thought it could be helpful to unbox 40 stems.

Flower food that keeps the water clean, improving vase life. Currently the wrapper is plastic whilst we look for an environmentally credible alternative.

Recyclable paper wrapping that can be adjusted to fit different flowers, keeping them snug in the box but looking smart when they arrive.

And last but not least the flowers. We pack them in bud so they'll start to open during their journey to the mainland, arriving showing some colour and giving a glorious waft of scent as the box is opened.

The box, strong enough to protect but light enough to minimise packaging waste. The cardboard used is made from 30% recycled board.

A gorgeous illustration of island life by artist Rachael Horner. Look closely and you'll spot flowers heading onto the post boat.

Your all important message on a simple card, giving your words the prominence they deserve.

We avoid seasonal themes, as flowers are sent for all sorts of occasions, happy and sad.

Flower care booklet with top tips on how to maximise vase life, plus a bit of information about our farm and flowers.

Very importantly we never include prices; it's a present after all.

'Beautiful flowers, reasonably priced and delivered on time. Will buy again.'

Farming with nature in mind

We've started to identify fields where growing flowers isn't possible but which are perfect for helping nature thrive. On some of these fields we've planted cider apple trees, providing more diverse and better connected habitats for nature. The environmental benefits don't stop there, these trees will help the land capture and store carbon.

Cider by post?

Any apples we grow will be this land's 'side hustle'. You won't be seeing Churchtown Cider but the apples won't go to waste. We hope St Martin's Vineyard will find them useful.

More trees to come

We're planning to plant more trees where they'll make a difference to biodiversity. We're being supported in this project by the Duchy of Cornwall, who have funded the trees and provided great advice.

Team news snippets

Summer is a little quieter on our farm than winter, so some of our team have headed off on adventures.

Justyna, who you may have spoken to on the phone, has been living in Northern India, fulfilling her ambition to focus on her yoga practice.

Niall swapped Scilly for Japan, where he's been studying and performing Japanese flute in some sweltering summer temperatures.

And Tomaz and Mirjam continued their cycling adventures but with a brief pause to get married. Naturally they arrived by bike – congratulations to them both!
